STOREHUB

The ad features a light beige background. On the left, there's a large '55% OFF' text in black. Above it, 'NEW BUSINESS PROMO' is in white on an orange bar. Below the discount, 'ON STOREHUB POS' is in black. A list of features is shown in orange-bordered boxes. On the right, a man in a dark polo shirt stands behind a counter with a computer monitor displaying '11:37 Monday, 1 November'. The STOREHUB logo is in the top right corner.

Key Summary and Takeaways

Lifestyle-based creatives:

- Scenes are shown clearly and easy to understand
- Feature and high-priority elements placed near the center of the canvas
- Creatives tied to a concrete pain point convert better than generic business empowerment messaging.
- Saturated (but not too overly) orange-ish background (flower fields, CNY reds) create more scroll-stopping contrast than clean and plain blues.

Promo-based creatives:

- People are still being hooked to promos
- Cleaner & lighter background allows for easy readability, which leads to good comprehension, and potentially an increase in SQL or MQL

Key Summary and Takeaways

- Clear and big headline are winners. It helps the audience understand what they are looking at.
- Stronger problem/solution narrative helps audience relate to pain points
- Exaggerated expressions improve emotional engagement
- Topic-specific (e-invoice compliance) resonates with a targeted audience
- For creatives that have movement or emotional value, exaggerating their emotions can help sell our message better
- New and different style like the comic can "catch the audience off-guard". We can try experimenting more on that front also.
